

No, no, not more of those damned whores!

Lt Ralph Clark, 1790

Some of our convicts I have heard even to boast of the crimes and murders committed by them and their accomplices, but the far greater number were harmless unfortunates....

My paternal grandmother's grandmother

The Currency Lads may fill their glasses,
And drink to the health of the Currency Lasses;
But the Lass I adore, the lass for me,
Is a lass in the Female Factory

Author's Acknowledgments

This book would not have been possible without extensive assistance from the late Kay Daniels to whom this book is dedicated, from Jill Roberts and from my editor and friend Edith Speers. Staff of the History Department of the University of Tasmania both past and present including Professor Michael Roe, Richard Ely and Stefan Petrow were extraordinarily helpful as were other members of the staff. I wish to acknowledge the assistance of the following people: Ian Pearce and the staff of the Archives Office of Tasmania; Tony Marshall and the staff of the Tasmanian Collection, State Library of Tasmania. Stefan Petrow and Tansy Rayner Roberts read and commented on the manuscript.

Most of the information on the female convicts of Van Diemen's Land, their names, ships and colonial records were sourced from Notorious strumpets and dangerous girls by Phillip Tardif. I have relied heavily on this book for the facts from which I could recreate the stories of individual women and their lives.

Special thanks must go to Dianne Phillips, David Woodward, Miranda Morris and Christine Woods each of whom allowed me extensive and generous use of their unpublished material, though Christine's book The Last Ladies: female convicts on the Duchess of Northumberland, 1853 has since been published and is highly recommended to the reader.
